

Barbara Kay: In landlord vs. religious Muslim couple, no one won. Everyone lost

Tuesday May 9th, 2017

Crystal Schick / Postmedia

Years ago, my then- lawyer son was seeking affordable lodging in Manhattan. He discovered many landlords wouldn't rent to lawyers: too quick to litigate small grievances. This was a permitted form of rental discrimination? Yes, according to my son, who wouldn't have conformed to that stereotype, but was penalized for it anyway.

I wondered about the discretion allowed to Canadian landlords. I was informed a certain latitude is allowed — if, say, the applicant is a professional tuba player and practices six hours a day, an extreme annoyance to other tenants. That seems reasonable for, after all, the tuba- practicing stereotype is borne out in all cases, whereas with lawyers, its merely a presumed nuisance — and not even to other tenants, but only to the landlord.

I was reminded of the delicacy of this question — what constitutes a reasonable prejudice for a landlord assessing applications for tenancy — by a recent case brought before the Human Rights Tribunal of Ontario (HRTO), in which landlord John Alabi was fined $12,000 for having discriminated against his Muslim tenants on the grounds of their faith.

What constitutes reasonable prejudice for a landlord assessing applications for tenancy?

Montrealers Walid Madkour and Heba Ismail rented a Toronto unit from Alabi for a less than three- month stay, beginning in January of 2015. Alabi had to show the unit to prospective new tenants, and told the couple he would give them a 24- hour heads up before a viewing. Madkour and Ismail asked for an additional notice of an hour, so that the visit did not coincide with any of their five daily prayer sessions, and to permit Ismail time for modest self- presentation. Alabi did not co- operate with that request, agreeing only to send them a text message shortly in advance of the viewing. Another irritation was Alabi's refusal to remove his shoes in the bedroom, which also served as the tenants' prayer space.

From the news report, I instinctively felt sympathy for the tenants. Especially since, from one of Alabi's text messages to Madkour regarding the extra notice required ("Welcome to Ontario, Canada"), I sensed a certain attitude on Alabi's part that might indicate anti- Muslim bias.

But then I had an email discussion with "James," who is both a lawyer and landlord ("a very good one," he says). James is well placed to commentate on the issue. He began his legal career with the Ontario attorney general, who prosecutes cases before the HRTO. He asked me to consider the situation from a landlord's perspective, and when I did, I had to rethink my response to the case.

James pointed out that Ontario landlords are not legally obliged to exert more than "reasonable efforts" to notify tenants of viewings, so tenants' "rights" have not been abrogated if landlords refuse to provide more than 24 hours' notice (which is the standard in most other provinces). He agrees that the landlord's refusal to remove his shoes was disrespectful, but considers the other demands — accommodation for multiple prayer times and religious costuming — unreasonable in a secular society. Pertinently, James is himself religiously observant, but told me he would not expect special accommodation in the same situation on that account.

Instead of going nuclear with the human rights tribunal, basic mediation would have revealed compromise could be reached through a smidgen of mutual courtesy.

I asked James what he thought a righteous religion- based grievance might be. He wrote, "It is difficult to know other than to say that they are getting broader and more absurd all the time. In light of this decision, what landlord wants to open themselves to this kind of debacle for failing to navigate someone's personal belief system?"

Most sobering is the fact that the defendant must hire a private lawyer, whose costs — thousands of dollars per day, according to James — are not recovered even if he wins. Minimally, James reckons, Alabi is out $22,000. On the other hand, win or lose, the cost to the complainants is nothing but their time before the tribunal.

I now sympathize with neither party. Instead of going nuclear with the HRTO, basic mediation would have revealed that compromise could have been reached through a smidgen of mutual courtesy. It wouldn't have killed Ismail to wear modest garb indoors the whole afternoon. It wouldn't have killed Alabi to remove his shoes. It wouldn't have killed Madkour to assign specificity to their prayer time.

As it is, Alabi is now feeling unjustly fleeced and resentful toward both the HRTO and the tenants. Other landlords are perhaps uneasily regarding practicing Muslims the way New York landlords perceive lawyers. The tenants (and their peer tenants everywhere in Ontario) have discovered that small-beer religion-based grievances are not only perceived as important rights issues by official bodies, but can offer lush returns on a negligible investment. Nobody learned anything about our culture's commonly held value of social reciprocity. So, at taxpayers' expense, nothing good was accomplished here. Quite the opposite, one might say.

National Post
Kaybarb@gmail.com
Twitter.com/ BarbaraRKay

\(-- image--\) Find National Post on Facebook

- Twitter
- Google +
- Reddit
- Email
- Typo?
- More

- Comments
- LinkedIn
- Tumblr
- Pinterest
- Digg
- FarkIt
- StumbleUpon

Topics: Full Comment, Culture and Lifestyle, Landlord, Ontario, Ontario Human Rights Tribunal, Religion

Full Comment Videos

Post Picks

It's a shame Prince Philip will never read this column lauding him. Because he'd crush it in an instant

\(-- image--\)

Those who mock the royal family are hard pressed to find anyone else who exemplifies duty and character with such modesty and wit. On a 1979 White House visit Philip not only chatted with two butlers, he poured them drinks. In 1960, before Britain's General Dental Council, he defined...

Sidney Crosby fell hard into the boards a week after he was injured — and concussion spotters did nothing

\(-- image--\)

A reporter asked Penguins coach Mike Sullivan if Crosby was evaluated for a concussion Monday night. 'No... No...' Sullivan said. He did not elaborate

Doughnuts are on a global rampage, and they must be stopped

\(-- image--\)

We love doughnuts. That's why we must save them from themselves

For Sale: A £375,000 flat with a view... of Windsor Castle

\(-- image--\)

It may be small, but it's in a good location. Just ask the neighbours...

Eugenie Bouchard downs Maria Sharapova in three- set thriller shortly after calling her a 'cheater'

\(-- image--\)

The Canadian had said Sharapova's return from a doping ban was 'unfair to all the other players who do it the right way'

Recent Tweets

- Jasmin Zine: Let's worry more about violent Islamophobes — and less about writers who fear being called 'Islamoph... ow.ly/ Eh2w50bnrBq 58 minutes ago
- Jasmin Zine: Let's worry more about violent Islamophobes — and less about writers who fear being called 'Islamophobic' news.nationalpost.com/full-comment/1... 1 hour ago
- John Robson: It's a shame Prince Philip will never read this column lauding him. Because he'd crush it in an in... ow.ly/ rn6h50bnn2d 1 hour ago
- Ed Rogers: Are the Democrats dumb enough to believe that 'the GOP wants you dead' will work? ow.ly/43mr50bnn2c 1 hour ago
- Marc A. Thiessen: Le Pen would not have been an ally to Trump. He is very lucky indeed that she lost ow.ly/ QjQf50bnn2e 1 hour ago

\(-- image--\) FP Comment

- Canadian shoppers pay when Visa and MasterCard squeeze small business
- William Watson: How Canada proves Le Pen wrong about choosing between patriotism and globalism
- Matthew Lau: Here's the truth about Ontario's dismal economic performance that Wynne's Liberals hope you don't notice

Our Partners

- Infomart
- The Province
- Vancouver Sun
- Edmonton Journal
- Calgary Herald
- Regina Leader- Post
- Saskatoon StarPhoenix
- Windsor Star
- Ottawa Citizen
- Montreal Gazette

Classifieds

- Remembering
- Celebrating
- Classifieds Marketplace
- Workopolis
- FlyerCity
- Classifieds Self- Service

Services

- Advertise with us
- Subscribe
- Subscriber Services
- ePaper
- Newsletters
- Site map

Legal

- Privacy
- Terms
- Contact us
- Copyright & permissions

Connect with Us

- Twitter
- Facebook
- LinkedIn
- Pinterest

© 2017 National Post, a division of Postmedia Network Inc. All rights reserved. Unauthorized distribution, transmission or republication strictly prohibited.

Powered by WordPress.com VIP

(-- image--)
(-- image--)(-- image--)(-- image--)